Description of Physical and Landscape Features:
This one story bungalow sits under a front gable roof on a parged foundation. A hip roofed porch runs nearly the full width of the south façade supported by large square columns resting on a solid balustrade. This balustrade, like the rest of the house, is clad with horizontal drop siding finished with cornerboards. The gable features open eaves, wide barge boards, and knee brackets, all typical of the style. The windows are a 1/1 double-hung wood sash, some with wood framed screens attached. The windows typically appear in pairs throughout the house, surrounded by plain board trim on three sides and narrow sills with decorative apron moldings. A brick chimney is located in the northern portion of the house, and has been painted and has seen the top replaced with concrete.
Statement of Significance:
This residence appears to have been constructed for Dudley Woodward, a printer, and his wife Grace following their purchase of the property in 1915. Six years later, Mrs. Woodward, a widow, transferred ownership to Watson B. and Ella C. Eddy. It is unclear if the couple resided in the house before selling to John William and Crimora J. Smith in 1931. Although the couple recorded a deed to Ernest E. and Alice M. Smith three years later, they continued to occupy the residence. In 1950, Charles T. Blackburn purchased the property where he remained just a few years before it was sold by his estate in 1953. The subsequent owner, Mabel C. Nations, lived in the house for ten years before it was transferred to Marian Elledge, a retiree, in 1964. She continued to occupy the property until her death in 1966-67.
