Description of Physical and Landscape Features:
The bungalow style house has a gable roof sheathed in composition shingles. It is clad in round-edge drop siding and sits on a concrete foundation. The house features bargeboards, rafter tails, decorative brackets, and a watertable and cap. The upper story extends out over the large front porch and rests on slender columns. The porch area has been altered completely into a 1960s style. The chimney was done in this same era. The windows are primarily 1/1 wood and most of the ground floor windows have pedimented hoods. The original front door remains and is surrounded by trim that matches the windows. A small addition with aluminum windows has been added to the north side of the house. A parged concrete retaining wall surrounds the front yard. There is a carport attached on the south side.
