Description of Physical and Landscape Features:
This 1-1/2 story vernacular house is rectangular in plan and sits on a concrete foundation with a basement that has been converted to a garage. The gable roof is covered in composition shingles. The house is covered with drop siding grounded by a water table. Wide corner boards are fluted. Windows are primarily 6/1 wood double-hung. There are two entry doors on the lower level of the front façade. Each are multi-pane with multi-pane sidelights. The non-original flat roof entry porch is supported by round columns and has an open rail. The roof of the porch is used as a porch on the upper level. A gable roof, supported by round columns, protects the entry door on the upper level. A flat roof addition is on the south façade. A second story has been added to the rear.
