Description of Physical and Landscape Features:
This house sits at the south end of Washington Street under a shallow hip roof. A second hip covers the full width porch on the north façade, supported by a series of tapered square columns. This hip, as well as the main hip, features shallow enclosed eaves. The house has been entirely clad with asbestos ceramic shingles that resemble wood shingles. The windows are predominantly 3/1 wood casement sashes, appearing singly, in pairs, and in groups of three. A large chimney sits on the west wall of the house, and its cap has been altered with the addition of a metal cap.
