Description of Physical and Landscape Features:
This modest bungalow is part of a larger grouping of similar residential buildings. It sits under a front gable roof, with a small gable over the entry porch on the west façade. The main gable features open eaves and decorative knee brackets that penetrate the wide barge boards, typical of the style. The house is clad with double drop siding finished with cornerboards above the foundation level. The windows are all vinyl sash replacements of the original windows with divided upper sashes and plain board surrounds. The porch gable is supported by a pair of large knee brackets and covers only the entrance to the house.
