ARCHITECTURAL / PROPERTY DESCRIPTION

(Include expanded description of the building/property, setting, significant landscape features, outbuildings, and alterations)

The 1 1/2 story house is set on a level bench above low rock outcropping at the far west end of Canemah; The front facing gable house has a simple main footprint that is enriched with detailed and styled moldings, detailed front porch, and a one story addition at the rear. The house had a south addition that has been replaced. The house has a rich landscape setting as well

Exterior Materials: The main roof is a simple steep gable form with architectural grade composition shingles and no brick chimney; the front porch is near full width and has a low sloped hipped roof supported on four decorative posts, fluted with capitols and bases; the rear addition attaches to the back wall and is cross gabled with an extended porch roof, similar materials, lower slopes; The main house is sided with horizontal bevel boards, while the addition has shiplap boards; trims include plain wide trim, enclosed soffits, and most noticeably pedimented window heads, and shouldered head trim on the front façade; Windows: 6/6 wood double hung with exterior metal storm windows; At north: second level window door, and main level oval glazed entry door with side lights; rear second level window in horizontal layout; the addition and detached garage are similar materials to each other and compliment the main house mass. Foundation is concrete.

Alterations: The rear addition, 1980c, and garage are not historic but compatible; the 1911 Sanborn map indicates a prior south addition of similar layout. The addition now serves as the house entry. Prior rehabilitation efforts.

Landscape: Sited on a bench above the rock outcropping along the highway and facing the river, the house has been able to develop its own sense of space and setting at the west end of Canemah. The primary access has shifted to an approach from 3rd Avenue due to the heavy highway traffic. The 'front' yard is enclosed with a low laurel hedge at the rock's edge that allow lawn and ornamental plantings; to the west there are native trees and woodland setting of the bluff area.

HISTORY

(Chronological, descriptive history of the property from its construction through at least the historic period [preferably to the present])

The 1983 building survey described this as the John and Catherine Coburn house. However, subsequent research indicates that their house was located at the opposite end of town, described as "south of Hedges Street." A photograph now in the collection of the Oregon Historical Society and published with a caption in Historic Houses of Clackamas County in 1936 shows a picture of the Coburn home, which is not this one on McLoughlin Boulevard. The photograph and a 1911 Sanborn map indicate the Coburn house was on the river side of McLoughlin at Hedges Street; it was subsequently demolished.

The current owner of this house at 902 McLoughlin, who has lived in it for 32 years has a information given to her by descendents of the Paquet family that suggests that the house belonged to the Paquets, who lived in Canemah from 1853-54 and again from 1863 to around 1890. Francis X. Paquet Sr. (b 1811) and three of his sons were well known carpenters and boat builders. The house at 402 3rd Street (c1870) was also owned by the Paquets. As the family had 12 children, it is possible that the family had two dwellings, and the one on McLoughlin might have been lived in by Francis X. and his wife Marie Louise.
